FAQ

Q How does the sizing compare to the current singlet?

A While the size is comparable to the previous singlet, the new product is constructed from a heavier weight fabric, such that it is less forgiving when going down a size.

Q Can a woman wear a men's fit singlet, or vice versa?

A Yes. If someone feels the other design is more suited to their body type, aside from the cut the appearance is very similar, so this would not be apparent.

Q Will further colours be available?

A Yes, and these will be included in future limited edition releases. We would welcome any feedback you might have from customers on styles that could be popular.

Q How does height factor into sizing?

A If a lifter is unusually tall for their bodyweight, they may prefer to go one size larger than the sizing chart would recommend.

Q What is the warranty on this product?

A We provide a 12 month warranty period against production defects on this product. Although we expect our products to last a significant amount of time, we would expect that in the rare event that a production defect is missed by our quality control, then it would be apparent to the customer within this period. Issues outside of this period are typically attributable to wear and tear.

Q How does sizing compare between the men's and women's garments?

A They are similar sizes overall, with some subtle differences between the two fits. The women's fit tapers in at the waist, has a shorter torso section, and a wider leg.

Q Is the powerlifting singlet supportive?

A The fabric in the powerlifting singlet is much heavier, at nearly twice the weight, and will add compression. However, it is not a store of potential energy like a squat suit.

Q Will there be team powerlifting singlets?

A Yes, we are working with national federations on the designs for team powerlifting singlets, for those athletes representing their nation at IPF level events. However, these will only be available for team members.

Q How should you clean and care for the powerlifting singlet?

A We recommend washing the singlet with a mild detergent and allowing the product to air dry. The singlet is not suitable for machine washing in temperatures over 40C (104F) or machine drying.
